The Challenge for the Future

This country is a successful, competitive and open economy

We have a number of strengths upon which we can build, and some weaknesses we need to address. Our game at home needs improving in order to shine on the world stage. This can be done if we seize the opportunities of the years ahead – and it is essential if our people are to enjoy prosperous lives with fulfilling work and high quality public services. At the same time, the world is changing in fundamental ways.

Technological innovations are transforming how we live and work. We are dealing with the rise of an ageing population.

The way we generate and use energy is also changing rapidly. The National Industrial Strategy depicts how we are building an infrastructure for the future, along with how we will help businesses create better, higher-paying jobs in every corner of this country.

We will make investments in the skills, industries and infrastructure of the future. It ensures that our country and its citizens can embrace and benefit from the opportunity of technological change.

Technological innovations are transforming how we live, learn and work.
